Amoral, smart, merciless, and unkind, this multi-million copy is the ultimate manual for any interest of the New York Times castor-from the author of human nature laws, observation, or defense against the ultra-control. The book is the most interesting and fascinating of the people's magazines, from the philosophy of Robert Green and Joost Elffers in the history of power in 3000 years, Sun Tz, and from Karl von Klausiwatz and the life of figures also from Henry Kssinger to P.T. Beno. Some laws teach the need for caution (Law 1: Master Never Flashes), others teach the value of trust (Law 28: Enter action with boldness), and many recommend absolute self-defense (Law 15: Crush your enemy completely). Every law, though, is usually one thing: interest in total domination. In a daring and captured two-color package, 48 laws of power are ideal whether your goal is to understand the laws of victory, self defense, or just the game.
